- Ralph Waldo Emerson.

President Terry Mullen introduced Matt Garrett, President of Central Carolina Community College, for a program describing how Matt developed his oratorical abilities in a one-room elementary school in Church View, Virginia. The school got a new teacher, who Matt described as regal, refined, graceful and drop-dead good looking. She was from Richmond and was named Miss Goforth. Miss Goforth wanted to develop the students' elocution to follow the great Virginians Washington, Jefferson, and Patrick Henry and decided to train the students using 'show and tell'. Being poor country kids the 'show and tell' took the form of a collection of cigarette butts, a skunk hide, a chicken with no feathers and came to an ignoble end with a hog's stomach and Miss Goforth's retreat to Richmond. Matt did not get to 'show and tell' his father's set of post hole diggers.
