Andy Manhardt introduced Rebecca Shellenberger, Executive Director of the Lee County Arts Council, for a program describing how at the Arts Council "We Bring The Arts To The Community And The Community To The Arts." The council which was established in 1978 has as one of its major functions to serve as a middleman for funding between the North Carolina Arts Council and local purveyors of the arts. The funding is usually in the form of matching grants.

The LCAC will sponsor a street chalking on April 23rd and a Latino Arts Festival at Depot Park on April 24th. The Council has an art gallery on the mezzanine floor above the Shops of Steele Street at the corner of Steele and Carthage streets in downtown Sanford and has high hopes for the proposed arts incubator in the buggy factory building on Chatham Street.
