Charles Oldham introduced Vic Czar, Public Works Director for the City of Sanford, for a program explaining the opportunity Sanford citizens have to expand their waste water treatment plant on an existing site, with today's regulations, lower construction cost and lower financing cost. The need for waste water improvements runs on about a 20 year cycle. The years 1973-1992 represented an upgrade cycle and the city is planning for a 1992-2012 cycle with the newly expanded plant coming on line in 2015. The area population is expected to grow at a 3.2% rate in the future with population pressure from both north and south. If the City plan can be carried forward both construction costs and financing costs are expected to be lower than normal. Sanford has an opportunity in that the plant can be expanded at an existing site with an established set of regulations. The project will be financed with revenue bonds which means the users will pay for the plant. Triangle J has established the fact that Sanford water and sewer rates are mid-range for the Triangle J region.
